Kennedy Era Notes.

There is great mourning in the camp over the rumor that the whiskey supply had run short.

The miners in the face of any of the six tunnels of the Imperial mine can show fine veins of ore, or, more correctly speaking, a continuous vein.

Quite a number of residents of the camp are carrying scars as a result of the personal encounters that occurred last Saturday night and Sunday morning.

W. A. Van Reed says the Shoshone claim owned by himself and Ed. Stone, is developing into a fine property.

The Frue Vanners for the Imperial mill are expected daily.

Kennedy's Calaboose.

The Constable of Kennedy has just completed a temporary calaboose by putting a two inch plank door over a tunnel, and in this offenders against the public peace will find lodgment until after trial.

Previously Constable Abel has found it practically an impossibility to maintain entire good order, for the reason that whenever a man was arrested he had no place to confine him.

The tunnel calaboose will not be an inviting place to stay even for a few hours, but it is the best that could be done, and may itself be the means of acting as a preventive of disorder.—Kennedy Era.

MEN WHO COULD SEE.

A Newspaper Fable With an Excellent Moral.

Phil. Mighela has the following in the New York Journal. It contains a moral which every business man can understand:

Once upon a time there grew up a great city called Progress, which was hard by the Plain of Get There in the country of Industry. And verily in the great city were many merchants who embarked in many and diverse businesses whereby they acquired much wealth, and the country waxed exceedingly rich.

And it came to pass that in the great city of Progress, which was hard by the Plain of Get There in the country of Industry, there came certain wise men, saying, "Verily, here is a queer people." The wise men marveled much, and in the seventh day of their arrival they embarked in a new enterprise, and brought forth the great Daily Informer. And the people bought of the new thing, which was a paper, and they read thereof and declared that it was good.

Now it came to pass that in the great city of Progress, which was hard by the Plain of Get There, in the country of Industry, dwelt three merchants. And these three merchants engaged in selling shoes to the people, wherewith for the people to clothe their naked feet, that they might not be injured upon the stones and briars in the highways. And one of these men was exceeding keen of vision, having two good eyes. And one saw not so much, for, behold, he had but half an eye. And the third saw not at all, for he was blind.

Now, in the seventh day after the great Daily Informer came forth, the merchant who was keen of vision conceived a great thought. Therefore he hid himself unto the place whence came the great Daily Informer, and with moneys bargained with the wise men that were to inform the public in their new paper that the merchant had much goods to sell. And the people, beholding the merchant's name in the great Daily Informer, did come to his place of business, and they marveled at his goods and bought many things.

And again it came to pass that the merchant who could only see a little beheld that his business rival did receive much trade, wherewith he waxed wroth and swore a mighty oath. Then this merchant went likewise to the great Daily Informer and did bargain to have his name and announcement placed next to reading matter. And the people, beholding his name in the new paper did come in hordes to his place of business. And they marveled much at his goods and bought many things.

Now, behold the man who had no eyes knew not why he had no trade. And the people forgot that he was alive, even unto the persons who were hunting for close bargains. And it came to pass that this man had no trade and no moneys, wherewith he waxed exceeding thin and did verily starve to death.

Therefore, I say unto you, the keen-eyed man knoweth a good thing when he seeth it, and even a man with half an eye can see the benefits of an advertisement, but verily, the blind man never seeth anything.

Mrs. Huson's Examination.

During the train-wrecking case at Woodland, Wednesday, General Hart, of counsel for the accused, after badgering Mrs. Van Huson, the lady who was engaged to marry Engineer Sam Clark, and putting to her questions through which he hoped to injure her moral standing before the jury, to which questions she made no damaging replies, he finally asked her who she was afraid of, to which she promptly replied:

"I'm not afraid of you!"

Before Hart could gather himself together she continued, "I am not afraid of any man, but I am afraid of a coward."

"Well, who threatened you?"

"Mr. Ray as much as anybody."

Witness said that on last Sunday week Ray and his wife had some kind of a fuss, and Ray called her to witness something, when he approached her and shook his fist in her face and threatened her.

"You have considerable feeling in this matter, haven't you?"

"No sir."

"Wouldn't you like to see Mr. Knox hanged?"

"No. I don't want to see anybody hanged; all I want is justice done."

When a crime has been committed, and it can be proved, I think it ought to be punished by law.

The War in the Orient.

Shanghai, Aug. 11.—A dispatch from Chee Foo says the Japanese attacked Port Hamilton (Port Arthur) yesterday evening and were repulsed. A special dispatch to Chee Foo confirms the report. The Japanese fleet attacked the Chinese fleet at Wai Hai Wai yesterday morning, and were repulsed at one entrance to the harbor and subsequently attacked it at another entrance. The dispatch says the Japanese made a daring attempt to capture the forts and arsenal at Wei Hai Wei.

The Chinese squadron, with the exception of some small gun-boats and torpedo boats sailed the day before for another port. The gun-boats at the fort kept up such a well-directed fire that the Japanese were unable to enter the harbor. The Chinese torpedo boats were ordered to advance, and as they did so the Japanese fleet retired. The same fleet of Japanese attacked the harbor entrance later in the day. The result is not known.

A dispatch from Shanghai says the second attempt of the Japanese fleet upon the harbor has been defeated. Another dispatch says the Pei Yang fleet is engaged with the Japanese fleet and a stubborn battle is being fought. Twenty-one ships are taking part.

Fire at Yerrington.

Another incendiary fire occurred at Yerrington (formerly Pizen Switch) on Friday morning. The rascal who seems determined to burn the town made the work more effective by cutting the hose of the fire company. Its a pity the authorities can not catch him and make a fitting example of such a dastardly coward. The Tidings gives the following list of losses:

J. G. Smart, three buildings $4500; furniture, $700. No insurance.

Mason Valley Lodge of Odd Fellows, regalia, etc., $500; no insurance. Company I. N. N. G., arms, $250; no insurance.

Thomas Barton, saloon fixtures and stock, $1800; barber shop fixtures, $250, no insurance.

Curry & Barton, restaurant fixtures etc., $600, no insurance.

Steve Curry, interest in building, $400, no insurance.

Peter Krestler, shoemakers tools stock, $100, no insurance.

J. G. Kaufman, dwelling, $750; store building, $700, insured for $500.

Brann Brothers, building, $1500, merchandise $800, no insurance.

A. J. Littell, merchandise, $500, covered by insurance.

Reno Borax Company.

The Reno Borax Company Works are now in successful operation. The marsh is situated in the extreme north-western part of Washoe county, near the California line. The works were started a few days ago by inexperienced men before the arrival of B. F. Grey, who has charge of the works. The result of the first day's work under unfavorable conditions was 900 pounds of crystallized borax worth 7½ cents per pound.

The result is very satisfactory to the company. The marsh is very extensive and promises to be profitable.
